Stars share Springfield Youth Club success stories

THE achievements of mentors and members of Springfield Youth Club were celebrated at their annual awards night. With celebrity supporters including West Ham captain Mark Noble (pictured); former singer with hit 90s boy band Damage, Andrez Harriott; and Formula One racing champion and youth club president, Sir Jackie Stewart presenting awards, the event on 14 March was a joyous commemoration of the values and success of this valued community club in E5. For a full report on the evening, see pages 6-7.

£2M SAFEGUARDING GRANT

HACKNEY has been awarded nearly £2million to overhaul the way local authorities approach child protection.

The funding, from the Department for Education, will allow the Council – in partnership with the University of Bedfordshire – to develop a new approach to safeguarding, which shifts the focus of social work from the family home to consider much wider influences.

Hackney's new programme will look at how peer groups, social media, neighbourhoods and schools impact on young people's vulnerability. An enhanced safeguarding system will be brought in to identify, assess and engage with peer groups and public and social spaces where young people are exposed to significant harm.

The programme will also work with transport providers, businesses, fast-food restaurants and other places where young people gather.

An aim is to reduce the need to move children away from unsafe social environments and instead, make places where they spend their time safer.

The funding will be used to embed changes over two years and the Council will report back to Government and share findings with other local authorities

Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, Deputy Mayor of Hackney and Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "Child protection is one of the most important things we do as a local authority, so we're excited to have the opportunity to invest resources and expertise in this important project, which has the potential to shape national and international policy around safeguarding."

Tackling London's housing crisis: have your say

Increasing the number of Council homes built in the borough, enforcement against rogue landlords, and campaigning against damaging Government reforms are among the ideas in a new housing strategy launched this month.

The draft strategy sets out how Hackney can play its part in tackling London's housing crisis and respond to residents' concerns about increasingly unaffordable rents and house prices in the borough.

Housing affordability was the top concern for people who responded to the Council's landmark 'Hackney: A Place For Everyone' consultation last year, with many saying that the private market increasingly did not cater for anyone apart from the wealthiest.

The borough's house prices have risen more than anywhere else in the country during the last 20 years, with the average price of a flat now around

“Our city only works when the people who make its economy tick can afford to live and work here”

£546,000, 17 times the average household's income. Rents in the private sector have risen 36 per cent in five years, with a two-bedroom flat now averaging £1,820 per month.

Residents are now being asked for their views on whether the Council's priorities for responding to these challenges are right, including plans to:

- Build high quality, well-designed, and genuinely affordable new homes
- Tackle housing unaffordability with innovative rental schemes
- Make better use of new and existing homes
- Address standards and affordability in the private rental sector
- Tackle homelessness and housing-related health and support needs

- Promote employment through housing schemes.

Philip Glanville, Mayor of Hackney, said: “London is experiencing an unprecedented housing crisis, and residents in Hackney have made it clear that they are feeling the pinch of rocketing rents, sky-high house prices and the struggle to find an affordable place to live.

“Our city only works when the people who make its economy tick can afford to live and work here.

“This crisis needs national solutions, but while the Government refuses to take action, Hackney will not stand by and do nothing.

“My vision is a Hackney that works for everyone. Our new housing strategy will help us deliver more genuinely affordable housing, tackle rogue landlords and find new ways to help people get a foot on the housing ladder.

“We need residents to tell us what they think our priorities should be so that together we can help more families find the home they deserve.”

The Council's existing Estate Regeneration Programme will build nearly 3,000 new modern, high-quality homes, with more than half for social rent and shared ownership. Its Housing Supply Programme, launched last year, will see at least 400 more built on under used Council land across the borough.

The consultation will run until 22 May, before a final strategy is considered by the Council's Cabinet later this year, based on feedback from residents.

Stik art sale gift

WORLD famous street artist Stik has announced that a Hackney youth programme is set to benefit from the sale of his unique artwork made to celebrate Pride.

The banner will be sold at internationally renowned art auction house Christie's and could fetch tens of thousands of pounds.

All of the proceeds from the sale of the Hackney Pride banner, which was created to represent the borough at the London Pride parade last year, will go to Project Indigo, which supports LGBTQI+ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, intersex plus) young people.

They face a much higher risk of homelessness, social isolation, family rejection, bullying, substance misuse and stigma-related mental health problems than counterparts.

The winning project aims to change attitudes, strengthen community cohesion, and help young people overcome challenges through confidence-building and skills training.

The funds from the sale will be used to train young people to support and curate an exhibition of Hackney's rich and diverse LGBTQI+ heritage.

The exhibition will be displayed in Hackney

Artist Stik with his banner at London Pride last year. It's sale will raise tens of thousands for charity Museum during LGBT History Month next year.

Print-outs of the archive will be distributed to all local schools and it will be permanently available online as a public resource. As a result, thousands of people will better understand Hackney's LGBTQI+ legacy.

Stik, who is a local resident, said: "Hackney's radical LGBTQI+ community has been fundamental in creating the freedoms we enjoy today. This exhibition will shine a light on our past victories and fallen soldiers in the battle for recognition."

"For the first time, our legacy will be officially recognised in a definitive archive to be immortalised and available to the public, empowering people around the world for generations to come.

"I'm happy to be able to give back to the queer community, which has helped me in so many ways over the years."

Stik is well known for his socially conscious murals, including 'Sleeping Baby' at Homerton hospital. Print sales of this work have so far raised more than £75,000 for the hospital's charity, Homerton Hope.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville said: "The Stik Hackney Pride banner is a powerful image that celebrates love and diversity. We are very lucky that money raised from this sale will not only fund support for LGBTQI+ young people in the borough, but will celebrate Hackney's LGBTQI+ history and create a legacy that can be used by generations to come."

Christie's will hold the online auction between 4 and 13 April. The banner will be on display from 31 March at its premises in King St, London.

News in brief

Lamé visits Dalston's nightlife

Mayor Glanville, Amy Lamé, Meg Hillier MP, and Dan Beaumont, owner of Dalston Superstore

HACKNEY had an extra sparkle about it when London's first Night Czar, Amy Lamé, held a walkabout in the area. Since the comedian and political activist was tasked with turning the capital into a 24-hour city, she has held these night surgeries as a way to connect with venue owners and workers, police, transport staff, emergency service personnel, revellers and residents, to see what they want from their city at night.

Accompanied by Meg Hillier MP for Hackney South and Shoreditch, and Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, she visited Hackney Winter Night Shelter, Homerton A&E and Shoreditch Fire Station. Dalston Superstore owner Dan Beaumont also took the group to visit various bars and restaurants along Kingsland Road.

Amy said: "Hackney's night-time economy is as diverse as you can get. I really enjoyed talking to local residents and business owners about what they want from the capital at night."

"From the buzz of Kingsland Road to the essential work of the emergency services at Homerton A&E and Shoreditch Fire Station, it is little wonder that this corner of the capital has become a hub of night-time culture." There will be more night surgeries throughout the year. MP Meg Hillier added: "Hackney is a truly 24-hour borough, with so much going on."

Get involved in future of Shoreditch developments

SHOREDITCH is to become the focus of a plan designed to protect its unique character.

The area provides more than 40,000 jobs, in 4,000 businesses, and has played a key part in the prosperity of the borough. It is also home to more than 7,000 residents and this is set to increase as more mixed-use development happens.

The plan 'Future Shoreditch' will describe a vision for the area in 2034 and set out planning policies that will guide and manage development and investment.

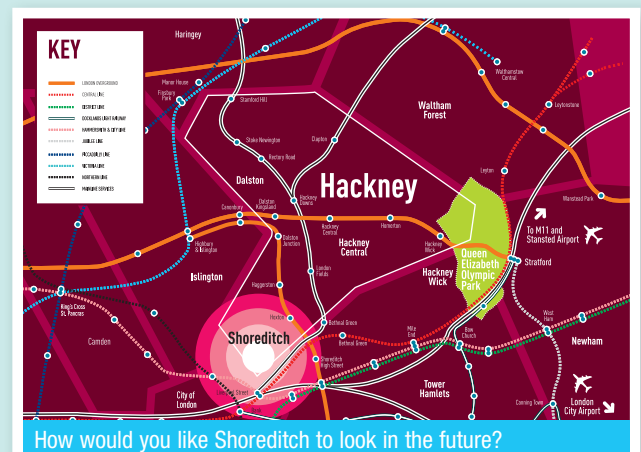

To start this process, residents, businesses and visitors are being urged to respond to a public consultation.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Planning, Business and Investment, said: "Shoreditch is at the heart of Britain's tech and creative industries. However, this phenomenal growth brings about a demand that drives development, and this needs to be curated and managed in a way that benefits Shoreditch and its future."

Youth Work: We offer apprenticeships with Young Hackney, which runs activities for young people across the borough, and offers advice and support on subjects like education, employment, housing or health

Trades: We have a well-established trades apprenticeship scheme in our Housing Service, which supports young people to become plumbers, electricians, and engineers

Revenues & Housing: Undertaking an apprenticeship in the revenues or housing departments will train you to support residents who have enquiries and issues relating to benefits, Council Tax, business rates, housing and homelessness

We're learning and earning

I'm gaining qualifications at the same time as working in a paid job, which really suits my skills and interests," says Janet Nkasaah, a youth work apprentice at the Council.

Janet (pictured above) says she felt 'pressured into going to university', but dropped out after a year, feeling that 'a formal sort of education wasn't for me'.

She adds: "I moved back to Hackney and found an apprenticeship role with the Council, working with young people. I feel really comfortable in the apprenticeship because I'm gaining qualifications at the same time as working in a paid job which really suits my skills and interests."

This month sees the launch of a new initiative, 'Hackney: Apprentices', which by 2018/19 will get 100 people like Janet working across a host of Council services that year.

Over the coming months, the Council will be offering apprenticeships at Levels 2, 3 and 4, in areas including business and administration, youth work, customer services, ICT, housing and environmental services. Opportunities in more service areas will be added during the course of the programme.

The 'Hackney: Apprentices' scheme is open to 16- to 24-year-olds who live in the borough, or have been educated in Hackney, or are care leavers.

All Council apprentices aged over 18 will be paid around £19,000 per year, which is above the London Living Wage, and well above the average apprenticeship salary of around £13,000 per year.

An apprenticeship is a full-time, work-based learning programme that combines accredited learning with paid work for one year or longer.

Council apprentices will be given accredited training from a high-quality provider, mentoring, and support to progress into a permanent job or a higher apprenticeship qualification.

If a resident is unsuccessful in gaining an apprenticeship position, the Council will provide support to help with alternative employment or training.

The Council will also be supporting other employers in the borough to create high-quality apprenticeships.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "We want businesses, big and small, to follow our example and give a young person a career kick-start, and help them to gain qualifications while they earn a fair wage."

"The Council will work with businesses if they need support to take on an apprentice and we will provide advice and guidance to other organisations wanting to support our young people."

Cllr Carole Williams, Cabinet Member for Employment, Skills and HR, said: "Apprenticeships can open up a host of options while providing the opportunity to gain a qualification, receive a wage and help to gain the necessary experience for the next step up."

A celebration of youth

Springfield Youth Club member and mentors share the joy at their awards night

By Dila Tumer

LOCAL heroes and high profile supporters joined together to celebrate the achievements of young people and their mentors at the annual Springfield Youth Club Sports Awards.

Guests made their way to the E5 club on 14 March where they were thoroughly entertained by young performers from Springfield Soul.

They

were followed by guest speakers including West Ham captain Mark Noble, youth club president and former Formula One racing driver, Sir Jackie Stewart, and singer Andrez Harriott, from 90s boy band Damage.

Andrez, who has since retrained as a criminologist and sociologist, spoke about his new career working with young people who have not received the kind of support offered by places like Springfield Youth Club.

He said: "I've performed in a band from a very young age and been very fortunate to travel the world and sell quite a few million records. I now work in prisons with young people, who unfortunately have not had what Springfield has provided for a lot of those here tonight.

"What I love about Springfield is that I can see so many young people benefitting from this provision. It is incredible."

During a Q&A session, footballer Mark said: "I was brought up the same. I went to a youth club in Canning Town and that's how you learn to respect people from all walks of life.

"I was speaking to these young people today and they all have good morals and they all talk to you properly. This is what places like this do."

Sir Jackie added: "It's a fantastic club, you should all be very proud of it. All of you who are in it now, and so many of the older generation who made it tonight – including me – should be proud to be associated with Springfield Youth Club."

Numerous awards were handed out to this year's high achievers in youth sports, coaching and volunteering.

Basil Edwards, 57, who received the Graham Hill Award for long service has been with Springfield for more than 10 years.

He said: "I saw some of these kids grow up and it makes me feel good to see where they started and where they finish. It has helped me grow too, it has helped me to be more patient – I am usually very impatient."

Event host and youth club manager, Steve Herbert, added: "What another fantastic evening. It shows what can be achieved when adult volunteers and young people work together. This youth club is a pillar in the local community and it is important we showcase our work and share our story."

The night ended in a burst of camera flashes as club members got together for photos to mark the evening.

Do you have an idea for a new social enterprise but need funding to set up?

The Beyond Business Programme, Bromley by Bow Centre, is offering start up funding for new or emerging social enterprises across Hackney, Tower Hamlets and Newham. Applicants and the social enterprise must be located in these boroughs.

Is my idea for a social enterprise eligible for funding?

To be eligible for a start up grant of up to £17,000 your idea for a social enterprise must:

- Have a clear social purpose and outcomes, such as employment for people with barriers to work, youth training, healthy living and local environmental improvements
- Have a sound business proposition and the potential to be financially sustainable without reliance on grant funding

Full eligibility criteria will be sent to all applicants

The closing date for submission of expressions of interest is 5pm on 5 May.

Beyond Business has already launched a network of 65 plus social enterprises in the East End and provides start up funding, strategic and business planning guidance, and practical business support including training and mentoring.

LOVE CLEAN HACKNEY

lovecleanhackney.hackney.gov.uk

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

By Harriet Worsley

Imagine you're in your twenties and launching a cool new app.

You can get mentors, funding, press attention... But if you're the same person launching a charity aimed at fixing really gritty social problems? Not so much," says Jack Graham.

It's exactly this imbalance that Jack is trying to correct. Back in 2013, he started a new institution called Year Here. It was launched with great fanfare at 10 Downing Street, but since then, the real work has been going on right here in Hackney, down an alley off Kingsland Road.

Described as 'a postgraduate course in social innovation', Year Here takes a select group of young professionals and supports them for a year while they try to build solutions to society's toughest problems.

Jack explains: "It's like a Masters degree, except the learning happens in the world, not the lecture hall. Not many of society's leaders have experienced the reality of our toughest challenges like the housing crisis or youth inequality.

"And you can't fix real problems without having real experience of them. So, for the first few months, we put our fellows to work on the social service frontline."

That could mean volunteering in a pupil referral unit, with children who have been excluded from school. It could mean getting hands on experience of homes for those with dementia, or hostels for the homeless.

Next, the young people are sorted into teams, and put to work for real organisations such as local authorities, housing associations and charities.

Only once they've had almost a year of frontline

The real university of life

Jack Graham is the founder of Year Now, a social innovation course which gives young professionals real experience to help them solve real problems

“Hackney is this perfect confluence of creative industries, social projects, spaces and opportunities” experience do they move on to the final stage of the course, coming up with their own charity or social enterprise idea to fix a specific social problem.

"Sixty three fellows have graduated from Year Here since 2013. Our fellows have volunteered more than 60,000 hours and 12 successful social ventures have been launched off the back of it," says Jack.

These include Birdsong, a fashion brand selling clothes that are handmade by women's groups, from elderly knitters to migrant seamstresses. There's also Cracked It, which trains young people either involved in or at risk from gangs, to fix cracked iPhones instead.

Other ventures are training former prisoners to be fitness instructors, turning refugees into foreign language tutors, and creating personal development programmes for those leaving care.

The school too goes from strength to strength. Currently, they have about 20 applicants for every place.

Jack says: "We started with 12 fellows a year, now we take 35. Within the next couple of years, we hope to take about 50 each year. When we started, people were a bit sceptical that 22- and 23-year-olds could really fix social problems. So seeing these ventures really flourish has been hugely rewarding."

He claims the scheme works because 'it's not about sitting in an ivory tower, designing policies and solutions for people'.

Instead, Year Here fellows get involved with local organisations, from Hackney Pirates literacy charity to the Inspired Directions School for children who struggle in mainstream schools.

"Hackney is the perfect base for us, because it's this confluence of creative industries, social projects, spaces and opportunities. Lots of our partners are local," he says.

One of Jack's fondest memories is of an event held in the organisation's first year.

He explains: "We had this idea for a 24-hour challenge, a bit like the ones they set on 'The Apprentice', but with a social focus. We decided to create Hackney's first human library."

They took over Hackney Town Hall and filled it with people with 'unique experiences or world views'. Anyone from the borough could turn up and, instead of borrowing a book, you could borrow one of these people for a 20-minute discussion.

Jack says: "Loads of people came, and it was amazing. It's such a cliché that Hackney is the embodiment of diversity. But the cliché's there for a reason. At the human library, we watched all these communalities emerge between people who seemed so different on the surface."

Perhaps that's exactly what Year Here is achieving, too.

Year Here is currently accepting applications for their next cohort of fellows – for more information – see their website, details below.

Breaking ground at the site of the new Nightingale Primary School: Anai Robertson-Azille (seven), Firdevs Ince (nine) and Thalia Williams (eight)

New school build

PUPILS from Nightingale Primary School gave a helping hand to builders as part of a ground-breaking ceremony to launch their new school.

Anai Robertson-Azille, Thalia Williams and Firdevs Ince got stuck in with their spades at the building site on 8 March.

The new premises, on the former Downsview School site in Tiger Way, E5, is a key part of the Council's school places programme; two new secondary schools will also be built, and some school sites remodelled to make best use of council-owned land.

On the Nightingale School project, the Council is acting as the developer and will also provide 89 homes to help fund the building works. This scheme – together with a new school and homes being built in Nile Street, N1 – will also raise around £12million for affordable housing in the borough.

Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Anntoinette Bramble, said: "This is a really important step to ensure that we have enough local school places for Hackney pupils. It was great to invite pupils who will directly benefit from this school to visit the site.

"In the absence of adequate government funding, we're having to think outside the box. By building homes for private sale, we plan to provide a significant sum for affordable housing, and go some way to covering the cost of delivering the high quality schools our residents expect and our pupils deserve."

By acting as the developer, the Council will be able to ensure that the maximum amount of money is available to deliver these priorities as it eliminates the need for a private company's profits and shareholders costs.

The new school will allow Nightingale Primary to expand to a two-form entry school, with state-of-the-art facilities, including an outdoor learning space.

Headteacher Abigail Hopper said: "The specialist teaching facilities we will have at the new school will allow us to provide an education for the children in Hackney that uniquely prepares them for modern life."

Work is due to be completed by late 2018.

All the world's a stage for lucky Hackney pupils

THREE hundred Hackney pupils will see a Shakespeare play for free this year, thanks to a charitable programme at the Globe Theatre.

Students from four of the borough's schools have been invited to watch 'The Taming of the Shrew' at the world famous theatre this spring. The production, part of the charitable Playing Shakespeare programme, has been specifically tailored for 11- to 18-year-olds and cut to 90 minutes in length.

Its director, Jacqueline Defferary explained: "I see the play as a perfect opportunity to explore pressing issues surrounding gender and relationships, important for us all today, especially young people.

"The play highlights how far we have come and how far we still have to go."

Since 2007, 150,000 state-school pupils have seen a Shakespeare play through the theatre's collaboration with Deutsche Bank. For many, it is their first experience of live theatre, let alone Shakespeare.

A scene from The Taming of the Shrew at The Globe

Patrick Spottiswoode, Director of Globe Education, said: "The real success is that the project is introducing students to Shakespeare and his plays as Shakespeare intended, through the power of play.

"One student was overheard leaving the theatre saying 'I knew I didn't like Shakespeare. Now I know I was wrong', an endorsement of everything Playing Shakespeare sets out to do."

Young scientists vie for STEM challenge prize

RESEARCH shows that women make up just 14.4 per cent of the British science, technology, engineering and maths (STEM) workforce, but Clapton Girls' Academy is bucking the trend.

The school's team is one of just six to reach the finals of a nationwide STEM competition at the Science Museum in London. The BP Ultimate STEM Challenge asks students, aged 11 to 14, to design solutions to real-world problems. Clapton Girls' Academy decided to build a rescue rocket.

Sophie, one of the team members, said: "We really enjoyed going to the park to test our rocket designs. It was a good opportunity to carry out an extended investigation, which we do not have time to complete in a normal school day. We are really looking forward to going to the Science Museum for the national final."

The finalists will present their work to an expert judging panel on 13 March, coinciding with British Science

Week. They stand to win a day of special STEM activities, as well as £500 for their school.

Andrew Ferdinando, science teacher at the Academy, said: "The girls demonstrated good scientific method and a high level of perseverance, often having to test their rockets in cold and wet conditions."

Currents

18 April – 7 May, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare St, E8 1EJ

THE New York Times has called it 'an indestructible global blockbuster'. And now, it is having its UK premiere at the Hackney Empire.

'Currents' is the latest production from the internationally acclaimed Israeli dance company, Mayumana. This time, they are taking audiences back to the 19th century, as Thomas Edison and Nikola Tesla battle each other to bring electricity to the masses. Mayumana brings this historic feud to life using acrobatics, dance and percussion. Expect vivid art projections, dazzling lighting effects, flamboyant costumes and original live music. It is, in short, electrifying. Tickets cost £10-£35.

THE BEING ME

Until 2 April, various opening times

'Being Me' is a photography exhibition exploring identity by students at Morpeth school. The exhibition follows a series of workshops led by Shahidul Alam, founder of multimedia organisation Drik, and a renowned photographer, writer and activist from Bangladesh. Free. All ages. Rich Mix, 35-47 Bethnal Green Road, E1 6LA. Info: 020 7613 7498; boxoffice@richmix.org.uk; www.richmix.org.uk/events/exhibitions/being-me

SKIP GALLERY – NA, I DON'T WANT NONE OF THAT AGAIN

Until 2 April, various opening times

This series of installations on the themes of love and death were created by artists Catherine Borowski and Lee Baker to bring art to unexpected places ie a skip in Hoxton Square. After Borowski's father left home, her mother abruptly converted to Islam. While undertaking the Hajj pilgrimage to Mecca, Borowski's mother died. The installation uses the skip as a marker, casting a shadow over hundreds of spindles, marking both the shadow of Catherine's mother's death, and referencing unmarked graves. (Not open 27-29 Mar.) Free. All ages. The parking space opposite 19 Hoxton Square, N1 6PB. Info: skipgallery@produceuk.com; www.artrabbit.com/events/skip-gallery-na-i-dont-want-none-of-that-again

ROTTEN JUICE

Until 3 April, 9am-5pm

Illustrator and animation director Will Barras became one of a new crop of young artists working in Bristol's renowned street-art scene thanks to his representations of fluid movement, unique narrative-driven composition, and line work. Maxwell Paternoster creates works that reflect his keen interest in the motorcycle scene. His drawings are full of incredible machines and weird creatures, dark and funny at the same time. Catch their joint exhibition on their home turf, Hackney Wick. Free. The Plague

5 April – 6 May, Arcola Theatre 24 Ashwin St, Dalston, E8 3DL

"SEVENTY years after its publication, Albert Camus' novel The Plague is being adapted for the stage and for modern times.

Written in the aftermath of World War Two, Camus' tale follows a plague as it sweeps through a city with terrifying results. Back then, it struck it a powerful chord with readers who were struggling to understand the fascist 'plague' they had just survived.

Today, multi-award winning director Neil Bartlett is staging the classic story at the Arcola. Ours are different times, but this frank and gripping adaptation shows that chaos – as well as the positive power of common humanity – are eternally and urgently relevant themes.

The Plague is staged at the Arcola Theatre from 5 April to 6 May. Tickets prices range from £12 to £22. For more information and to book tickets visit: www.arcolatheatre.com

PREVIEWLaboratory of Dark Matters*6-29 April, Guest Projects, 1 Andrews Road, E8 4QL

"EVERYTHING that we can see, all the matter that we can detect in the entire Universe, is less than five per cent of what we believe to be present."

That's the premise behind the latest exhibition at Guest Projects, in Broadway Market, called 'Laboratory of Dark Matters'. Last year, the nine artists involved visited Boulby Underground Laboratory to meet the scientists who are working on the frontline of dark matter detection. Inspired by what they found there, they are setting up their own lab to explore the places where art and science intersect. But this time, it's in a gallery and everyone's invited.

Visitors can see work in progress, chat to the artists, and take part in workshops on everything from cosmic particles to supersymmetry and phosphorescence. There will be live links to the Boulby lab, and a Going Dark Party with live performances.

The exhibition will be open 12noon to 7pm, Thursday to Sunday. Entrance is free, though some additional workshops and events will cost £6. For more information visit: www.laboratoryofdarkmatters.com

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville, was directly elected by the borough in September 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, email: mayer@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Rosemary Sales.

Forced to live in the asylum

By Rebecca Odell

UNTIL the 1980s, many people with learning disabilities were forced to live in hospitals under the Mental Deficiency Act (1913).

This was the first legislation in the country specifically relating to services for people with learning disabilities. Previously, they had often been placed in asylums alongside people with mental illnesses.

Under this law, people were diagnosed as 'idiots', 'imbeciles', 'feeble-minded' or 'moral defectives'. They had no choice about being made to live in a hospital, separated from their family and the community.

One of these hospitals was St Lawrence's in Surrey, which opened as a mental asylum for 'insane paupers' in 1870. Many Hackney residents were sent there.

Mabel Cooper was sent to St Lawrence's in 1952, aged just seven.

She remembered: "I went to this place in town hall to have a test, to see how bad the learning disability is. And they said 'you'll need care for the rest of your life...' I thought, how did they know that at that age?"

"You would think you were going into a madhouse, because of the noise. There were bars on the windows. It was like a prison."

"They just used to shout and pull you around. I don't like being pulled about. In the daytime, you weren't allowed to sit

"You would think you were going into a madhouse because of the noise. There were bars on the window. It was like a prison" on your bed. You had no privacy because if you went to the bathroom people could get into it."

Wards were long, with up to 50 beds crammed closely together. Patients had to share belongings.

Mabel said: "We didn't have any of our own clothes. They used to have a big cupboard in the wards. And you would just help yourself. If you had a dress on one day, the next day somebody else would have it on because it would have gone back to the laundry and come back again."

Harvey Waterman, from Hackney, was a patient from 1941 to 1970, and even remembers having to share a toothbrush with other people on his ward.

At the time, there was a widespread fear that if people with learning disabilities had children, this would lead to a deterioration in society. As a result, great efforts were made to prevent relationships between patients.

Men and women were put onto separate wards and chances to socialise were strictly controlled.

"Every Tuesday at seven o'clock, they would all go down to the dance hall. The men one side, the women the other. And in the middle there were staff. The men got up and asked some of the ladies to dance, they danced all the way around the staff. But when the music finished, the men had to go back to one side and the women back to the other because you couldn't mix," Mabel said.

The Mental Deficiency Act (1913) was finally repealed in 1959. Mabel left St Lawrence's in 1976 and went on to become the chair of People First, a self-advocacy group for people with learning disabilities.

Even today, in England almost 3,000 people with learning disabilities live in institutions, often far away from family and friends.

'Madhouse, My House?', an exhibition of memories and responses to the institutionalisation of people with learning disabilities, was researched and created by members of the Hackney-based theatre company Access All Areas. It is on at Hackney Museum until 20 May.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – a social enterprise restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch. This tasty dish is a comfort food favourite, with the Waterhouse twist providing a kick of flavour. As winter lingers, pair this dish with fresh greens or a crisp salad, for a filling meal. You could also add vegetables, such as peppers or tomatoes, for more nutritional balance.

Waterhouse's Senior Chef de Partie Trainer, Lucca Sokhi, said: "Mac and cheese is best when it's fresh. I like plenty of sauce oozing through the pasta so I can taste the cheese, and a nice crispy topping of cheese or breadcrumbs."

Mac and cheese

Makes 15 portions

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooling time
30-45 mins

Ingredients

- 500g macaroni
- 250g butter
- 250g flour
- 2 litres milk
- 10g chilli powder
- 50g dried oregano
- 5g ground nutmeg
- 200g grated mozzarella
- 200g mature cheddar.

Method

- First, cook the macaroni in boiling water for 8-9 minutes until it is al dente, and leave to cool
- In a separate pot, melt the butter. Then add the flour and combine
- When the mixture is shiny, mix in the milk, chilli powder, oregano and nutmeg and allow the sauce to thicken
- Add the mozzarella and half of the cheddar and continue to mix
- Combine the macaroni and the cheese sauce and place in a tray, topping with the remaining cheese
- Bake in the oven (180°C) for 30 minutes.

Waterhouse - through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, income from this enterprise goes back into training programmes across the borough. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open Mon to Fri, 9am - 3pm. Evenings and weekends available for large bookings and private events. For more info, visit: www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk For bookings e-mail: eat@waterhouserestaurant.co.uk; or call: 020 7033 0123.

Have your say on the future of Haggerston Baths

A SHORTLIST of two proposals to redevelop Haggerston Baths has been drawn up and the Council wants to hear residents' views on which option they prefer. The baths were closed to the public in 2000 and are on a list of the most endangered Victorian and Edwardian buildings in England and Wales. It currently costs the Council about £100,000 per year just to maintain and secure the building. Two firms – London and Regional and Castle Forge – are bidding to redevelop the site and bring it back into public use. Outline plans include using the building for community events, exhibitions, office space, retail units, and food and drink outlets. The Council wants local people to have their say on which scheme they prefer. These views will feed into a project to identify a long-term, sustainable future for this unique Hackney asset. To get involved, pick up a consultation pack from Centre 151, Whiston Rd, E2, between 6pm and 8pm, on 28 March or 27 April. There will also be a panel Q&A session – chaired by the Mayor of Hackney – on 12 April, from 6pm to 8pm. To complete the consultation online visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/haggerston-baths. The deadline for submissions is 5 May.
